Family and Honor

By Randy Johnson

Somewhat unusual in that Stone and Freya have each a storyline dealing with family. Remo Williams is their father with different women.

Great is back in her homeland, a chain of islands north of Scotland, participating in a ceremony that would restore her mother's honor. Stone wants to find his mother and is somewhat disappointed at what he finds.

A story of family and honor.

Outstanding.

Keep 'Em Coming...

By Eric Gilliland

So, #5 in this evolving series now sits on my Kindle. A long time fan of the original Destroyer Series I'm still getting to grips with this new generation. My personal benchmark for this series so far is #2 The Killing Fields. This one still doesn't hit that for me but interestingly I'm starting to get a real feel for this evolving universe that Warren and Gerald are creating. This was a pretty darn good addition to the series. More background on Stone, although my wish for the guy to toss the cigs and centre hasn't happened yet, so my irritation with that will have to continue, but not for too long please guys. Freya's storyline I found the most compelling. Thank goodness she's back to her old self. Wandering around for nearly two novels like a chicken with a broken wing was starting to do my head in. I really enjoyed this and am looking forward to #6. Bring it on guys.
